THIS WEEK

The return of Jensen Huang as chief executive of Nvidia dominated the week's international coverage, with several newsrooms reporting his reinstatement and the response of Wall Street analysts. Elsewhere, Huawei was found guilty in a US trial of trade secrets conspiracy and fraud, and Spain's Hernández de Cos was reported as set to lead the European Central Bank.

Anthropic's shares were reported to have fallen below their $83 IPO price. In Malta, the government launched the €4.7 million Familja+ scheme to support 7,000 children, while the MHRA opposed an increase in hotel licence fees. Two people were injured when a vehicle crashed into a wall in Tas-Sliema.
